giv 1 car. 2 calos. 10 shay. & to giv 10 dollars

For having heard that you wished to purchase a small place being out of health have concluded to sell my farm and I thank I can decide it so that I can suit you with any quantity of land with the buildings as cheap as any place in the county Considering the situation it is the old place where Doct Abbott once lived and lies between Samuel Fletcher's and the ~~the~~ Meetinghouse I well give a good payday if wanted if you think it will meet your approbation please to call soon and you will oblige me

Medicine - New Hampshire

Neighbor and adherent of noted botanic physician, Dr. Samuel Thomson

Manuscript account book, 1823-1836, relating to the professional career and domestic life of Dr. Nathan Wright of Washington, Sullivan County, New Hampshire.

Dr. Wright (1786-1853) was a botanic physician who followed the Thomsonian system of medical treatment by prescribing herbs, especially lobelia—known as pukeweed or Indian tobacco—and cayenne pepper, as well as peppermint, ginger, “coffey,” goldenseal, myrrh, and “bitter root.” He also prescribed and sold “Thomson bitters,” “nerve ointment,” “nerve powder,” castor oil, “bottles of drops,” pills, and “papers of powders.” Among three pages of assorted accounts with his preceptor, Dr. Thomson of Alstead, we note that Dr. Thomson supplied Dr. Wright with quantities of cayenne pepper, “coffey,” bayberry and elm as well as other medical supplies. Dr. Wright’s accounts show that he visited patients—in more than ten Sullivan and Cheshire County towns—boarded patients for extended periods of time, treated many children, performed many teeth extractions, and “altered” various farm animals. Patients included his father, Col. Jacob Wright (1758-1844) and other Revolutionary War veterans, Deacon David Farnsworth, and members of the Lowell family—Dr. Wright married Elizabeth “Betsy” Lowell in 1806. Four pages of lengthy entries relate to his oldest son, Dr. Ezra L. Wright to whom he taught medicinal skills. Both credit and debit entries are varied and include farm produce and animals, blacksmithing, shoe making, tailoring, textiles, cider, soap, and farm labor. These are excellent accounts of an early New Hampshire Thomsonian botanic physician—such account books rarely appear in the marketplace. We note that Dr. Nathan Wright is not included in The Early History of Medicine in Sullivan County, N.H. by Carl M. Stearns, M.D.

OCTAVO, marbled paper boards, calf backstrip. Contents very good, average soiling. 80 pages plus blanks. Together with a loosely inserted one-page letter from one James Spaulding (?), Lempster, February 11, 1829, offering to sell Dr. Wright “... the old place where Dr. Abeil once lived ...”
